The problem is-it's not her plan. Lady's wealthy family is legendary in the fashion industry, but she wants to escape their control and succeed on her own-so she runs away. When she stops for gas in a small town, she suddenly realizes she can't use her credit cards, leaving her with no idea what to do next. Del Ericson doesn't know what to make of the petite brunette in a sequined dress. Del's a farmer who loves the quiet life of his small town. When he runs into distraught Lady at the local gas station, he knows right away she doesn't belong in the country. Lending a helping hand, he pays for her gas. But when he realizes she really has nowhere to go, he offers her a safe place to stay. But her family isn't going to let her go without a fight. She never expected to fall for anyone, much less a farmer, but she's never been happier. When her family insists that she return to her legacy and take over the family business, Lady puts her foot down and insists she can be successful right where she is. Royce Blackwater is a billionaire businessman who's not afraid to break the rules. He seeks Lady out and makes her an offer that comes at just the right time. Or does it. Royce never offers something for nothing, and...
