B-270222 HMO preventive and monitoring services. Even s with comprehensive diabetes management programs have initiated their efforts mostly in the past 3 years. As a result, little is known yet about the effectiveness of these efforts or which approaches work better than others. Although we did not survey fee-for-service group practices on their diabetes management approaches, several of these groups also may be research DCCT exploring ways to improve diabetes care in response to the findings and practice guidelines. For example, one multispecialty group practice has established a comprehensive diabetes education and treatment center, and another group told us they have started to monitor utilization of the diabetic eye exam and have implemented a quality-improvement program to increase utilization. HMO Every in our survey reported using at least one type of effort to Most Efforts to Date Focus educate enrollees with diabetes about appropriate diabetes management. on Education Following are examples of the kinds of approaches they reported: Written materials: The most common approach ( used by 82 of the 88 plans ) is featuring articles about diabetes management in publications directed to all enrollees. Other approaches include placing brochures about diabetes management in physicians waiting rooms and making a comprehensive manual on diabetes care available to all enrollees with diabetes. One-on-one educational sessions: Sixty-eight s reported having HMO diabetes-related health professionals, such as nurses, certified diabetes educators, or other specialists, provide diabetes education to individuals 17 HMO with diabetes. During our follow-up interviews with 12 plans, the s reported...
