This book contains all the documentation Java programmers need to start creating highly customizable, great looking graphical user interfaces (GUIs) for their Java applets and applications. In addition to the complete and thorough quick reference, 'Netscape IFC in a Nutshell' also contains more than 20 tutorial-style, example-based chapters that introduce each of the features and GUI components of the IFC. These features include: A 'Pure Java' platform-independent, customizable look-and-feel, with a complete suite of GUI componentsIntra-application drag-and-dropMulti-font formatted text display, with a built-in HTML parserPre-defined color, font, and file-selection dialog boxesTimer objects that simplify animation by replacing threadsConstructor, an interface builder application freely available from Netscape The IFC 1.1 library is freely available on the Internet, for use in any Java application or with any Java-capable Web browser, and is bundled with Netscape's Navigator 4.0 Web browser, making it the ideal, and preferred, development library for that platform. 370 pp. Englisch.
